VA Representative Will Be In Logan December 19

Loren E. Kendall, V. A. representative from the Ogden office, announced he will be in Logan on December 19 and will be stationed at the local employment office from 8 a. m. to 12 noon, and at the Utah State Agricultural College between 1 and 5 p. m.

Legislation, which takes effect January 1, 1957, makes considerable changes in benefits to veterans and their dependents, Mr. Kendall stated.

The new legislation is called the Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act and completely revises the payments made to widows, children and dependent parents, where death of a serviceman occurred after January 1, 1957, and gives to those now receiving death compensation payments the right to continue under the existing method or to transfer over to the new method of computing payments beginning January 1, 1957, which, in many cases, would increase benefits to those currently on the rolls.

This new legislation also changes the present insurance set-up and limits the issuance of low-cost insurance to the period between now and December 31, 1956, thus making it necessary for veterans separated since September 2, 1556 to apply for Government insurance on or before that date.

Mr. Kendall will be available to accept applications for this insurance while he is in Logan and to explain the effect of this legislation on servicemen, veterans and their survivors.

The service available through Mr. Kendall is not restricted to just insurance and survivor's benefits, as he informs us he will be able to help veterans and their dependents on any problems that might arise concerning benefits administered through Veterans Administration, which also includes Education and Training, G. I. Loans, Hospitalization, Medical and Dental Out-patient treatment and various other benefits.

the health service, establishment of health insurance program and a more effective employment service, student counselling and all publications.

The ratio of three men to one woman student remained approximately static during the fall quarter but there were more married students than at any time in history and more students attended on scholarships.

Approximately 600 students attended USAC during the term on scholarships of varying amounts provided by friends, business and industrial firms and alumni groups.

For the first time in history of the college all freshmen women were housed on campus in new residence halls which were acclaimed as highly successful as evidenced by the long waiting list of applicants for admission.

A greater retention ratio of former students was noted by the Student Personnel office and the largest number of transfer students from junior college and other institutions in the history of the college was noted during the quarter.

The freshman class registered the largest increase but every class was larger than during the same quarter a year ago.

Registration for winter quarter will take place in George Nelson Fieldhouse on Wednesday, Jan. 2, 1957, and instruction will begin Jan. 3, Dr. Chase said.

A Child's Poems

Following are two short poems by LuAn Purser, 10-year-old daughter of Joseph and Bertha Purser, and a student in the Ellis school.

Silver Bells

Silver Bells, Silver Bells.
In the old church tower they ring.
The bells blend in with the carolers

And while the bells are ringing
The children shout with glee,
For all the toys they have found
Beneath the Christmas tree

—o—

Oh, Land Of The Beautiful

This land of sunshine, flowers and trees;
And the lovely sound of the humming bees.
The soft running water
And the lakes so still;
It stretches so far from hill to hill.

Court Rules On Indian Voting

SALT LAKE CITY (UP) — The Utah Supreme Court issued a unanimous opinion holding that Indians on reservations in Utah do not have the right to vote under present state laws.

The opinion was based on an appeal to the court by Preston Allen for the primary and general elections this fall. The state Supreme Court ruled peremptorily then against Allen.

The ruling was promptly appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court which granted a writ of review but has made no ruling as yet.

In its written opinion, the Utah high court held that:

1. Indian tribes, having considerably autonomy, operate independently of state government.
2. The federal government provides most health, education, welfare and other services without taxation.
3. Reservation Indians are largely non-English speaking and, because of their isolation, are uninformed.

Millions To Get Wage Increases

WASHINGTON (UP) — A record 5 million workers will get automatic wage raises next year, half of them averaging from 6 to 8 cents an hour, the Labor Department reported.

The number affected reflects the growth of long - term union-management wage contracts that call for pay hikes for more than one year as an assurance against annual strikes.

The department said 550 wage contracts provide for such pay hikes next year, including those in the important steel and automobile industries — usually the wage "pattern-setters."

The department said 90 per cent of the automatic pay hikes range from an average 5 to an average 11 cents an hour. They affect workers in almost all major industry groups, with the bulk of them in steel, automobile, farm equipment, aircraft, electrical, aluminum and other metal manufacturing and in construction, transportation, food and mining.

Moving Ahead

LONDON (UP) — Russia's aircraft industry is moving into the "very advanced" stage but is still hampered by the general backwardness of Soviet industry, the authoritative publication Janes All The World's Aircraft said today.

Polite, Anyway

STAMFORD, Conn. (UP) — Motorists found guilty of illegal praking here will receive Christmas cards instead of summonses.

The cards, which will cease to be issued the day after Christmas, have "A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year" greeting one side. The other apologizes to the motorist for having to issue summonses at any time of the year.

Proposed Highway Program Has Problems

By ROBERT E. JACKSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP) — The "do-it-yourself" engineer who will direct the greatest road-building project since the Romans, believes it will open a fantastic new frontier for economic and social progress in America.

In wartime it "might mean the very survival of the country," says Bertram D. Tallamy, white-haired 55-year-old chairman of the New York State Thruway Authority and former state public works commissioner who goes to Washington next month as federal highway administrator.

President Eisenhower named Tallamy to direct the first years of the long-range multi-billion dollar super-highway program after a nationwide search for a man who was both engineer and administrator.

"He is one of the world's greatest builders of roads," said Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks. "This assures the nation that history's biggest public works project will be constructed with outstanding skill, vision and integrity."

Tallamy, in an interview with United Press at headquarters of the New York State Thruway, a road which he built, looked at the national project.

Opportunity for Progress

"The opportunity for social and economic progress in the nation which will result from the successful completion of this system is beyond anything any of us can conceive at this time," Tallamy said.

"In New York I have seen vast new industries spring up almost like magic in open areas. I have seen big new trucking terminals, new warhouses for perishable and staple goods, thousands of people now employed along the thruway.

I have seen property values jump from $600 to $20,000 an acre. Recreation areas are enjoying a vast new boom with vacationers coming more frequently and from greater distances.

"If this has happened in one state on one road only 426 miles lng, can you visualize what will happen across the nation on 41,000 miles? The ultimate result cannot be foreseen.

"That is really the reason for this program."

Tallamy also underlined "the great security it gives the nation in time of war to have an express highway system."

"It is not only to move troops and equipment," he said. "It is extremely important to civic defense. It is possibly even more important in the decentralization of industry which this makes possible.

"With the enemy able to bomb concentrated areas, this decentralization might mean the very survival of the country."

Prefers Ice Fishing

Tallamy, a 5' 11', 180 lb. outdoorsman who prefers ice fishing to golf, a do-it-yourselfer who wired and paneled his own summer cottage on Bowman Lake, personally walked over many miles of the thruway.

"I don't believe a man can sit behind a desk on a construction job and know what's going on," said Tallamy, the grandson, son and father of an engineer. "For me to do the job the way it's got to be done, I must make frequent visits with state governors and highway officials. We must get in an automobile and go out and look at the problem before we can make a decision."

Tallamy has seen more than $150 million worth of new industrial plants employing 30,000 persons with an annual payroll of $150 million spring up along the thruway. A $4 million TV assembly plant went up at Batavia, N. Y., a $30 million shopping center in Yonkers.

He sees no reason why this cannot repeat itself on a national scale where farm products will move farther faster and more cheaply, where industry will locate in areas with steady tax rates, built-in basic services such as sanitation, the right climate, raw materials nearby, yet as in Syracuse, N. Y., draw workers from suburbs, villages and farm 50 miles away.

Tallamy still has an enineer's eye for detail. As he talks he puts on his glasses and draws little diagrams for anyone who doesn't get this big picture.
